

Rep. Heath Clark
District 147

Biography

State Representative Heath Clark was sworn into office representing House District 147 on January 12, 2015. His seat, which includes the Warner Robins and Centerville area of Houston County, has been his home since he was three years old. After attending Southeastern Baptist Theological Seminary School, as well as Middle Georgia State, while serving as a youth pastor in Houston County, Clark went on to become a software engineer at Robins Air Force Base where he still works.

Rep. Clark's political background ranges from local and presidential political campaigns to county and district party leadership positions. He is the director of media at his church, Sojourn, in Warner Robins and also serves on the Board of Directors of Caring Solutions.
